

Headlines: Hydrofracking Health Review; Barclays Center to Open

Posted on Sep 21, Posted by Administrator Category City

The state's health commissioner has been asked to review the health impacts of hydraulic fracturing in New York before Gov. Andrew Cuomo makes a decision on whether to allow the natural gas drilling practice. The head of the state's Department of Environmental Conservation decided to ask the state's health commissioner, instead of having a university school of public health or independent group make an assessment. Environmentalists said they would have preferred an independent review.

In the Press...

City breaks ground on final section of High Line park (Crain's)

Barclays Center in Brooklyn expected to officially open on Friday (Daily News)

Democratic reformer could learn of fate in district leader race on Friday (Daily News)

State comptroller says tax receipts \$147M below projections (Associated Press)

Mayor's report shows decline in parental involvement in schools (Wall Street Journal)

City program to help parents of high school students gain citizenship (WNYC)

NYC adopts standards for so-called Taxi of Tomorrow (NY Times)

Tags: Tagged in: Barlcays Center hydraulic fracturing Lincoln Restler MM
R

taxis