The New York Islanders will leave its suburban home in Nassau County and move to Brooklyn's Barclays Center in 2015

. "Not very long ago, I think it's fair to say the idea of a big-league team coming to Brooklyn would have been considered little more than a pipe dream," Mayor Michael Bloomberg said at a news conference yesterday announcing the news

. But some residents were unhappy about the announcement, wondering whether fans of the professional hockey team would exacerbate traffic problems caused by the new arena. "They are a Long Island team and there are more drivers," Peter Krashes of the Dean St. Block Association/Atlantic Yards Watch told the Daily News

. "Things are likely to get worse, not better."
