

Headlines: Hospitals Struggle to Recover; Most Sandy Looting Cases Tossed

Posted on Nov 20, Posted by Mike Muller Category City

Many city hospitals are still struggling to recover from the storm, and may be for a while. Bellevue won't reopen its emergency room until at least December, Coney Island Hospital fully operational until January, and the reopening timetable for NYU Langone Medical Center nor the Veterans Affairs Hospital is still murky. The extended shutdowns are stretching the resources of other hospitals, which are running at near capacity. Over 3,000 patients in the city had to be moved to other facilities due to the storm.

In the Press...

Most Hurricane Sandy Looting Cases Tossed Out (Daily News)

A Much Criticized Pocket of the Rockaways, Built to Survive a Storm (NY Times)

Mayoral Candidates Criticize Bloomberg on Schools During Forum (Daily News)

Report: NYC has Fewer Food Pantries Than in '07 (Associated Press)

Bloomberg Insists 911 System 'Functioned Perfectly' (NY Post)

City to Send Property-Tax Rebates That State Lawmakers Have Yet to Approve (NY Post)

Cellphone and Wireless Service Coming to More Subway Stations (NY Times)

NY Pension Fund Back Above \$150 Billion (Wall Street Journal)

Schools Add Makeup Days (Wall Street Journal)

Drillers Impatient with Slow Pace of Fracking Review (WNYC)

Tags: Tagged in: Bellevue Hospital health hospitals hurricane sandy