

Today's Lead: Quinn Wants Healthy Kids Meals At Chains

Posted on Jul 02, Posted by Mike Muller Category The Eye-Opener

Christine Quinn yesterday said she wants to impose health standards on meals marketed towards kids at chain restaurants. She said those meals should meet the guidelines set by the USDA for school lunches. The standards would apply to chains with at least 15 locations in the city. The change would be made either through legislation, which she may try to pass while still council speaker, or through rules adopted by the Board of Health if she's elected mayor. The proposal was one part of a plan to combat childhood obesity.

Other Stories We're Following

Silver Kills Own Ban On Confidential Settlements (Daily News)

Officials Knew 911 Was 'Losing' Calls (Daily News)

Panel To Review Up To 50 Convictions (NY Times)

Number Of Manhattan Apartments For Sale At Lowest Point In 15 Years (NY Post)

Pushback Against Cuomo And His Moreland Commission (Gotham Gazette)

Groups Call For More Public Input On Proposed Deepwater Gas Port Off NY Coast (Gotham Gazette)

Tags: Tagged in: children Christine Quinn health